

Prohibition Orders

The Health and Community Services Complaints Commissioner (HCSCC) has the power to issue a Prohibition Order (PO) against a person or persons or an entity providing a health service.

This fact sheet is designed to provide information for consumers and service providers during this process.

If the HCSCC is conducting an investigation into a person/s or entity, it can issue a PO if there is a reasonable belief that:

- the Code of Conduct has been breached; or
- a prescribed offence has been committed; and
- in the HCSCC's opinion, there is a danger to the health or safety of the public.

The HCSCC can issue a PO at the conclusion of an investigation.

A PO can be an indefinite ban or for a specific period, but the Commissioner does have the power to vary or revoke the order.

An PO can prohibit the person/s or entity from:

- Providing the health service or specified aspects of the health service;
- Place conditions on providing that service; and
- Offering, advertising, promoting or providing advice about the health service.

The person or entity must legally abide by the PO or they could be prosecuted with a fine of up to $10,000 or be sentenced by the courts to up to two years jail or both.

Any person/s or entity that has a PO issued against them has a right of appeal.

A PO issued in South Australia also applies in other States or Territories that have implemented the National Code of Conduct for Health Care Workers.
